DETAILED ACTION

Claim Suggestions

1. In claim 1 lines 9 and 10, “a second connector...for selectively and electrically connecting to the portable electrical apparatus” raises confusion because it appears that the second connector is designed for connection with the electrical apparatus, not the portable electrical apparatus. Appropriate correction is suggested but not required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1, 2, 3, and 5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Kim et al (U.S. Patent 7,041,400). The reference is directed to a battery pack comprising a battery module (100), a first contact (300), a second contact (500), a controller (210), and a memory module (230) (see Fig. 2). The second contact is connected to a USB transmission interface (see col. 4, line 25). The first contact is connectable to a portable electronic apparatus and transmits data and power thereto (see col.3, line 54 et seq), and the second contact is connectable to an electronic apparatus and transmits data thereto (see col. 4, line 34 et seq.). Regarding claim 3, the reference further discloses a protection circuit (220), which has the function of regulating battery voltage to the various battery pack components (see col. 1, line 29).

Thus, the instant claims are anticipated.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claim 4 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kim et al.

The reference is applied to claims 1, 2, 3 and 5 above. The reference further teaches that the battery module can be charged and discharged through the first connector 300. However, the reference does not expressly teach that the battery module is chargeable through the second connector (500), as recited in claim 4.

However, the invention as a whole would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made because the artisan would be motivated to modify the system of Kim et al. so as to allow for battery recharging through the second contact. As disclosed in the reference, this contact is designed as a USB port or other wired interface. Since this interface is designed for connection to an apparatus such as a computer, it would advantageous to be able to recharge the batteries in the battery module when the battery pack is attached to the computer or other apparatus in order to make efficient use of time while the battery pack is exchanging data with the computer. As such, the claimed subject matter would be rendered obvious to the skilled artisan.

Conclusion

6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure: Hong et al (2002/0142194), discloses a battery pack containing memory, a first contact, and a USB port in Figs. 4A-4C.
